VICTORIA'S TAX ON LEARNING WILL HURT FAMILIES AND SCHOOLS

The Victorian Government's announcement that it will impose payroll tax on non-government schools with fees of $15,000 or more will hurt dozens of schools and thousands of Victorian families and make a significant schools will be targeted by the Victorian Government, in a move that will affect 123 students. The average impact of the tax is $1,155 per

"School funding is a complex national arrangement, comprising federal legislation and agreements between the commonwealth and the states and territories

"This arbitrary decision to target schools for revenue shows a fundamental misunderstanding of how the system works, how schools operate, and the potential impacts of the tax on a complex needs-based funding model.

"Many schools will pay the Victorian Government more in tax than they receive in funding.

"The tax will hurt thousands of families who make sacrifices to educate their children in a school of their choice and are already struggling with cost-of-living increases.

"Schools will now have to consider whether to reduce programs, cut staff, or raise fees.

"This tax on learning is simply unacceptable no matter what arbitrary threshold is set

"We urge the Victorian Government to take the only sensible path and repeat." Mr Catt said.
