

"We need the land beside us returned so we can fulfil our master plan of a First Nations education precinct that offers opportunities for Closing the Gap, authentic First Nations engagement, and broader community experiences, employment and self-sustained funding."

Enrolments of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students have grown at an average rate of more than 6% per year over the past decade. There are 46 Independent schools where the majority of students are Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander, including 10 in Queensland.

Enrolments at Independent schools in Queensland increased 22% between 2018 and 2023, with more than 16% of school students in the electorate of Blair attending an Independent school.

Federal Member for Blair, the Hon Shayne Neumann said, "The success of Hymba Yumba is a testament to the passion and skills of the teachers and their commitment to providing a tailored learning experience for their students."

"Australia has the oldest living culture in the world and Hymba Yumba is drawing on that knowledge to nurture the next generation of First Nations leaders in our communities."

Hymba Yumba is one of 10 case studies included in Independent Schools Australia's recent report Improving Outcomes For All: Leading Reform Through Innovation, which illustrated innovative approaches to the national school reform priority areas of equity, wellbeing and workforce.

Independent Schools Australia Chief Executive Officer Graham Catt said Hymba Yumba's dynamic approach to education was delivering clear benefits to its students and the community.

"Hymba Yumba is a powerful example of how Independent schools can innovate to provide exceptional learning environments for their students," he said.

"The Independent sector plays an important role in educating Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students in rural, remote and urban areas."

"It's crucial that schools such as Hymba Yumba have access to adequate funding and resources to maintain the positive impact they have on our communities."

Mr Catt said ISA would continue to collaborate with the Australian Government to ensure Independent schools receive the support necessary to serve their communities and deliver strong learning outcomes.

ISA is the national peak body representing 1,216 Independent schools with close to 720,000 enrolled students, accounting for approximately 17 per cent of Australian school enrolments and a workforce of 122,000 people. Independent schools are diverse, serving a range of different communities across Australia.
